RAISING FUNDS FOR CONSERVATION AND ANIMAL WELFARE ORGANISATIONS
IN OSA, COSTA RICA, INCLUDING YABA CHIC WILDLIFE CONSERVATION AND OSA CONSERVATION.

The Osa Peninsula is one of the world's most important biodiversity hotspots, protecting rare primary rainforest and marine ecosystems.

Despite covering less than one per cent of Costa Rica's land area, it is estimated to contain around 2.5 per cent of the planet's biodiversity, making it a critical stronghold for global conservation and the preservation of Central America's last intact natural landscapes.

SCULPTURE EXHIBITION 2026

ZAC GOLDSMITH

Environmentalist and former Environment Minister Zac Goldsmith will open Art for Nature, an exhibition of his bronze sculptures depicting some of the world's most vulnerable species. Opening on Wednesday 11 February 2026, the exhibition will raise funds for a range of conservation and animal welfare organisations, including Yaba Chic Wildlife Conservation (YCWC) in Costa Rica, which Goldsmith founded last year.

Zac has spent his entire life campaigning for measures to protect nature: as an editor, campaigner, politician and fundraiser. At the start of Covid he discovered a love of sculpting and in the past two years he has raised nearly £500,000 for nature and animal welfare from selling his bronzes. Zac said; "It's amazing to me that I can raise funds for heroes fighting to protect and restore nature and end the worst excesses of animal cruelty just by doing something I love doing."

"The sculptures are inspired by some of the extraordinary creatures we're trying to protect, including individual animals I've been lucky enough to meet."

INTRODUCTION

I visited the Osa region of Costa Rica five or so years ago and was astonished by its beauty. Osa is often described as the most biodiverse place on Earth, but like everywhere it is under threat from illegal wildlife crime and encroachment.

I committed to doing what I could to bolster its protection and that's how Yaba Chic began. It is a stretch of intact and pristine rainforest, part of a corridor of forest that links the great national parks.

Yaba Chic Wildlife Conservation is a project within the reserve to rescue, rehabilitate and release endangered wild animals that have been injured, orphaned or confiscated. There is nothing of its sort for many miles and so demand was far higher than could be accommodated.

The project will soon be open to all local school children, who will be able to visit the centre and rainforest reserve and learn about their local wildlife, and why it needs protecting. Art for Nature is one of the key vehicles for ensuring it has the funds it needs to flourish.

YABA CHIC WILDLIFE CONSERVATION

Yaba Chic Wildlife Conservation (YCWC) operates within a larger network of protected areas of tropical forest on the edge of the Golfo Dulce, or Sweet Gulf where Humpback Whales travel each year from both the Northern hemisphere and Antarctica for breeding and calving.

At present there is much greater demand for wildlife rescue than existing organisations can cope with, and there are no equivalent facilities for many, many miles.

YCWC is led by Sandy Quiros, one of Costa Rica's leading vets, who has overseen the building of a veterinary clinic and facilities designed for all types of wildlife, from Jaguars and Ocelots to Macaws and Anteaters. Previously Sandy worked at Alturas Wildlife Sanctuary.

THE MIGHTY JAGUAR

From Mexico through the Andes to Argentina the Jaguar has been revered for millennia in pre Columbian societies, and today in contemporary cultures. The Jaguar is the national animal of Guyana, dominating that country's Coat of Arms. It is an extraordinary animal, at home in water as it is in the trees and the forest floor. But like so many species it is endangered by human activity and it needs our support.
